St James Street back to its best thanks to £2.9m improvements

■ Restoration officially unveiled after investment by Heritage Lottery Fund and the Council

St James Street is back to its best after large scale investment to restore the area.

The stretch of Walthamstow High Street features art deco buildings dating back to the 1920s, but had fallen into disrepair.

A £1.46m grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) and £1.36m from the Council made it possible to revamp and regenerate the area. Contributions were given by freeholders and leaseholders, and many local people volunteered their time.

59 properties were restored, as were a number of historic features from the area. Bricks were cleaned and repaired, and unnecessary signage and clutter was removed. New shopfronts were installed, as well as new heritage lighting.

Council Leader Cllr Clare Coghill cut the ribbon the unveiling event. Attendees at the launch were able to enjoy live music performances, food from a variety of vendors and a live DJ set.

She said: "This heritage led scheme has brought the buildings, and the local area, back to its former glory. There is so much heritage here, it was important that it should gain a new lease of life and made available for people and businesses to benefit and enjoy."

"This could not have happened without the HLF and the hard work of local businesses and volunteers. This is community based regeneration at its best. I am therefore really pleased to be able to formally open the St James Street area and give a boost to the local economy."

As well as improvements to the public space, 36 local businesses have received support and training in visual merchandising, promotion and marketing and employment legislation.

Emergency! Drill tests the borough's disaster response

Council officers and police cadets played victims affected by the disaster

A major disaster hit Waltham Forest last month – but residents need not be alarmed as it was a drill to test the borough's emergency plans.

Council officers and police cadets played "victims" affected by a large fire in a block of flats, as the Chingford Assembly Hall became an emergency rest centre for the drill. The British Red Cross, who work with Waltham Forest, also took part in the day-long event that aimed to ensure the Council's response to any major incident was well organised and effective.

Up to thirty "victims" of the disaster tested the response team's ability to deal with medical issues, angry or frightened residents, and caring for the needs of children or vulnerable adults.

Cllr Liaquat Ali MBE, Cabinet Member for Transformation and Commercial Services, said: "We've spent today going over some role play exercises to make sure that we are prepared in Waltham Forest in case a major incident takes place. It's been really good to see so many volunteers getting involved and playing their parts with such enthusiasm. Certainly this scenario seems real."

"We have done a lot of work with the Red Cross and making sure that they are involved in our emergency planning. At the moment this is one exercise, but we have another planned very soon where the emergency services will also be involved. Emergency drills like this mean that we will know what to do in an emergency situation – we are well prepared."

Residents can take steps to prepare for major incidents by following the advice on the Waltham Forest Council emergency planning webpage that contains contact information for essential organisations, as well as guidance for businesses and employers. Cllr Clare Coghill, Leader of Waltham Forest Council, said: "There is no substitute for carrying out an exercise, and it's been really interesting to see how the council officers and Red Cross teams have been helping the volunteers in character as distressed residents. I think that there's so much we can learn and take from today."

"After Grenfell and some of the challenges we've seen this year it's really important that Waltham Forest is ready, and I believe we would be ready if we faced something really terrible here. Hopefully we never will – but if we did, we would be ready."

Benefit fraudster told to pay up or do time in jail

A benefit fraudster and money launderer was told pay up or go to prison after he was taken to court by Waltham Forest Council.

Salih Ozbay was ordered to pay a total of £135,000 after his trial last month under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002.

Mr Ozbay has already served a year in prison for three counts of benefit fraud and one money laundering offence. He had falsely claimed more than £25,000 in Housing Benefit and more than £18,00 in Council Tax Benefit, as well as unsuccessfully applying for extra housing benefit falsely claiming that he was suffering severe financial hardship.

Ozbay did not declare, however, that he received rent for four properties that he owned, that he received student loans and grants and that he was the company secretary for two businesses.

When he was sentenced at Snaresbrook Crown Court, Judge Hammerton described Ozbay's actions as a "brazen attempt to obtain benefits to which he was not entitled".

This new trial comes after a further, financial investigation was completed into the money Mr Ozbay gained from his crimes.

As a result, he has been ordered to pay a confiscation order of £83,605 plus legal costs of £51,395.

The Leader of Waltham Forest Council, Cllr Clare Coghill, said: "This sentence shows that you will be caught if you commit a crime and steal taxpayers' money. We will not give up until we get the right result for the taxpayer."

"He has to pay the fine by 7th December 2017. If he doesn't he will go to prison for 18 months. While in prison, the debt would still incur interest and on his release he would still have to pay the confiscation order. So either way, we are able to claw back the money."

Mr Ozbay was tried at Snaresbrook Crown Court

Leyton Cricket Pavilion to become new food market

A decaying Victorian cricket pavilion in Leyton will be transformed into a food market with a £1.5million grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF).

The Grade 2 listed building will become home to a restaurant, café and training kitchen serving locally sourced food. Meanwhile, a historic tin hut on site will become a local produce market.

Waltham Forest Council leader Cllr Clare Coghill said: "The aim is to revive these dilapidated facilities before they fall into further disrepair. This is a fantastic opportunity to put new life into a place that was a key part of Waltham Forest's heritage, and to turn it into facility that will offer the community the chance to come together to enjoy great food."

The works will create full and part-time jobs, apprenticeships and more than 70 heritage building crafts courses delivered in partnership with the local Building college.

Cllr Coghill added: "I am really excited that so many work and training opportunities will be offered in an area with high levels of social deprivation and that there will be an emphasis on healthy eating to address high levels of obesity."

The pavilion was built in 1886 influenced by Tudor and Indian architecture. The tin hut was built ten years later as a dining hall.

The site was home to Essex County Cricket Club till 1932 with county games played there until 1977. The ground is still used for cricket matches today, although half of the pavilion is no longer in use.

Councillor Ahsan Khan said: "Many local people told us that they have been inspired by the project and want to get involved. This will bring great benefits to the area and is another reason why Waltham Forest is bidding to be the first London Borough of Culture."

Stuart Hobley, Head of HLF London, said: "We are delighted that National Lottery players are able to support the preservation of this striking building, and provide a hub for the local community."

eBay seller fined £20,000 for selling harmful cosmetics

A Leyton eBay cosmetic seller has been fined more than £20,000 for selling harmful goods.

Ishtiaq Ahmad and his company, Beautycare Fashion Ltd, was fined a total of £20,170 for listing unsafe cosmetic goods on the website.

Ahmad had been running his cosmetic business since 2015 from his home in Leyton, until Waltham Forest Trading Standards pursued a criminal case against him after seizing 1857 unlawful cosmetics.

In his trial Ahmad pleaded guilty to eight offences of putting unsafe skin lightening products on the market via eBay. Some of these products contained the banned cosmetic ingredient hydroquinone and other cosmetic products were illegally labelled.

Councillor Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Lead Member for the Environment, said: "We are very pleased with this result as it shows that the courts and the borough will not tolerate this type of crime. It does not matter what type of business they are and what excuse they may have, if they are breaking the law and putting people in harm's way, then we will do everything we can to prosecute them."

At the Magistrates' Court Ishtiaq Ahmad identified himself as being the Company Director of Beautycare Fashion Ltd and owning both eBay accounts Beautycare_fashion and beautydesire_27.

He explained that he had relied on the provision of suppliers' invoices as being sufficient information to ensure the compliance of the illegal and unsafe cosmetic products.

The Bench said: "These are serious matters which could have caused harm. Ahmad had high culpability given the health issues associated with Hydroquinone."

HighTide waves goodbye to Walthamstow after successful theatre and arts festival

Walthamstow's HighTide pop up theatre, comedy and children's arts festival is likely to return after a successful first year.

The event, which was staged in The Mix tent in Walthamstow Town Square Gardens, as well as Mirth, Marvel and Maud on Hoe Street, from Tuesday 26 September until Sunday 8 October, was a hit with local people and visitors to the borough alike.

Local actors who took part included David Aula in The Vanishing Man and Adam Willis and George Vere in The Starship Osiris. Leyton comedian Rob Auton grew his hair and beard for a year before performing his Hair Show.

There were also children's performances by local organisations including the E17 puppet project, a family disco hosted by Walthamstow's Bebop Baby and a kids musical event performed by Mrs H and the Singalong Band.

Discounted tickets were given away to local residents and many free tickets were offered family shows with the support of The Carntyne Trust.

Festival producer and Walthamstow resident Paul Jellis, who runs a HighTide Festival in Suffolk, said: "We have already had a number of enquiries from people hoping that they'll see the festival return next year so watch this space!"

Cllr Ahsan Khan, Lead Member for Libraries, Arts and Culture, said: "Events like this are the reason Waltham Forest deserves to be a Borough of Culture."

Help to celebrate our borough's Cultural Stars

As part of our bid to become London's first Borough of Culture, we have been asking you to find and nominate the unsung heroes of culture within the borough – anyone who has made a difference locally through creativity and culture.

We have had some excellent Cultural Star nominees so far, including Louise Goulden, of The Together Project, and Russell Frost, owner of Leytonstone's Hooksmith Press.

Louise Goulden founded social enterprise The Together Project in 2017 to bring together people of different ages with the aim of reducing loneliness, widening children's understanding of society and helping to integrate local communities.

The project recently launched its first initiative 'Songs and Smiles', a weekly singing and social group for babies, their parents and elderly people. It has been running in residential care home Ross Wyld in Walthamstow since July.

Delighted by her Cultural Star nomination, Louise thinks the Borough of Culture bid is a brilliant way to showcase Waltham Forest and its unique communities.

She said: "Waltham Forest is a special place that inspires creativity. From the beauty of nature in our forest and wetlands, to our vibrant, grass roots artistic and cultural scene, to the warmth and generosity of our communities, it's a unique mix that enables talent and great ideas to flourish."

Russell Frost runs letterpress print shop Hooksmith Press in Leytonstone. His shop creates limited edition runs of posters hand-crafted using a combination of traditional wood type and metal type.

Most recently, Russell opened his doors to attendees at the Leytonstone Street Fest so that they could try out the shop's antique presses and create their own 'Back the Bid' postcards.

Talking about Waltham Forest, and the importance of the Borough of Culture bid, Russell said: "It's great living in Waltham Forest. We are fortunate to have access to an abundance of cultural offerings and opportunities, with Epping Forest and the River Lea as a natural backdrop.

"The legacy of being London's first Borough of Culture will shape the future direction and values within the borough. This will ensure that cultural opportunities continue to be accessible to all and a big part of what defines the borough of Waltham Forest going forwards."

All the successful Cultural Star nominees will be hosted at a special afternoon tea event at the William Morris Gallery in November.

Black Comedy makes History

A comedy night launched as a celebration of talent to commemorate Black History Month is celebrating its 15th anniversary.

Black History Month Comedy Night will be held in Walthamstow Assembly Hall on 20th October. Every year it draws a crowd of almost 1000 people. Hosted by Eddie Nestor and Robbie Gee, it has attracted award-winning stand-ups from Black and Minority Ethnic groups including Curtis Walker, Richard Blackwood and Slim. Newcomers also perform, mainly coming from black and minority ethnic communities.

The show is the brainchild of Glen Watson, who worked for Waltham Forest Council for two decades. He said: "This comedy night is unique to Waltham Forest. No other London borough has a comedy night as part of Black History Month. A lot of councils do Black History Month more as an educational event."

Watson launched the event in response to an under-representation of black comedians on TV. The night has evolved from an over-18s event to a family cabaret night, serving food and hosting musical performers, including Jermain Jackman, winner of The Voice in 2014.

Mr Watson said: "Not many events allow 15-16-year-olds to come along, but it is really important to prize them away from the ipads, phones and playstations."

He added that the event's legacy has been promote black comedians, allowing them to become more mainstream. He said: "It is all inclusive – over the years we have had more and more mixed race couples turning up. It's evolving in a similar way to the Notting Hill Carnival."

Interview with comedian Glenda Jaxson

Glenda Jaxson should be an inspiration to us all. The school dinner-lady turned comedian has battled thyroid cancer, even performing on stage while undergoing radiotherapy and chemotherapy.

Next Friday Mrs Jaxson will, once again, appear on stage at Waltham Forest's Black History Month Comedy Night. This is despite losing two members of her family to the devastating hurricanes in Dominica.

Glenda described the devastation to her 88-year-old Mum's motherland: "Hurricane Maria has taken all of Dominica. There are no ATMs and people do not have anything. I can handle the streets of London, but I am a coward. I could not handle being there."

Glenda views comedy as a coping strategy. Her 88-year-old mother is her inspiration. She says: "My Mum came here from Dominica at the time there were signs saying 'no blacks, no Irish and no dogs' in public places. And she told me, 'we laugh at people – you laugh first darling because you do not know if they are laughing at you'."

Glenda says: "It is so important to learn about Rosa Parks and Martin Luther King and Malcolm X, but Black History Month should not just be for a month. We all need to learn from Black History. But we need a relief from black history too – when you talk about slavery, you look at the audience and they can get very depressed."

She says: "I love performing in Waltham Forest – I'd do it every year if they ask me," she told Waltham Forest News. "The Black History Month comedy night is for all ages. When I am too old to do comedy I don't want to be stuck at home – I want to get out and have a laugh."

Glenda's humour is based on stories about her own life. She has previously got up on the stage in Walthamstow and joked about her sex life after her husband had recovered from a stroke. She's also laughed about how she risks of getting killed in her sleep because she leaves her windows wide open at night to help cope with menopausal hot flushes.

One of her gags was about overweight women wearing leggings. She remembers: "I got off stage in Walthamstow Assembly Hall and right in front of me there were three fat girls in leggings. So I just said 'attack me – please!' Luckily two of them found it hilarious."

Parking changes help vulnerable residents

Parking policy is changing for some residents in the borough

Carers and elderly or disabled Waltham Forest residents will benefit from proposed changes to parking in the borough.

The newly announced changes to Traffic Management Orders (TMOs) in Controlled Parking Zones (CPZs) are targeted to help vulnerable residents.

Currently Blue Badge holders have to display their Blue Badge when parked at home to get their free parking entitlement. This situation can cause anxiety as Blue Badges are a common target for thieves. The new virtual permit for Blue Badge holders will enable them to sleep easier as they cannot be stolen.

Carers who receive DWP Carers' Allowance will be able to access a free resident's permit for the relevant zone. That will enable them to make home visits without the hassle of trying to find a parking space.

The number of free visitor permits available for households with a resident aged over 60 will also be increasing from 30 x one hour to 60 x one hour permits, more than any other London Borough. With more opportunity to host visitors, the change will help older people to feel less isolated.

Some residents who have to pay for Visitor Permits because of how close they live to transport interchanges, visitor attractions and places of work will receive new online discounts. They will receive ten hours of vouchers for the price of eight if they buy digitally.

A new Traders Permit is being introduced that can be purchased for week or month-long periods, or combinations of the two where work is being carried out on your property. This will be cheaper than traditional Visitor Permits and will be easier for residents to manage than books of vouchers.

Park and stride gets kids to school

A supermarket is encouraging parents to park there and walk their children to a nearby school in a bid to reduce pollution and boost their children's exercise levels.

Morrisons Chingford is allowing Mums and Dads to park in specially designated parking places. They then walk the remaining half a mile to Chingford Hall Primary School. The innovation is Waltham Forest's first official Park and Stride scheme.

Cllr Clyde Loakes, Deputy Leader and Cabinet Member for the Environment, hopes other schools will be inspired to take part. He said: "The new Park and Stride project means that parents do not have to drive to the school gates when dropping kids off or picking them up. It means that the area around the school is safer for pedestrians and cyclists, and the air around the school is much cleaner with fewer harmful particles hurting little lungs.

"Each family who joins it makes the area that little bit safer and cleaner. I know we all want to make every effort to protect the health and safety of our children. If we work together we can make a real positive impact to young lives."

The designated Park and Stride bays will be available to use during school term times from 7am to 9am and then 3pm to 4pm.

He was impressed by the care he received when he visited the hospital for a procedure.

He said: “All the staff were marvellous when I had my minor operation and short stay at Whipps Cross.

“I whole heartedly support a new hospital for them and everyone in the local community.”

Nigel loves Waltham Forest, and thinks that its hospital facilities should reflect the borough – he said: “I love this vibrant and edgy borough, and it deserves the best hospital facilities possible.”

Whipps Cross as it is now is ageing, and in the future it won't have capacity to treat all of the patients, like Nigel, that it needs to.

Nigel said: “The current hospital is a mish-mash of different out-buildings scattered over a massive site. One new building, catering for all our needs, will be far more efficient and comfortable for patients and all the staff doing an amazing job there.”

Keep your head up

Make sure to mark World Mental Health Day on 10 October. The theme this year is ‘Mental Health in the Workplace’, so as well as friends and family, think about the wellbeing of your colleagues. You don't have to be an expert to be supportive. Checking in with someone by asking them how they're doing, listening and not judging can be helpful. Just be there and yourself. A full programme of activities is planned in the borough, including free tickets to a football match offered by Leyton Orient, a film showing at Leytonstone library and a free pamper and smoothie taster event at YMCA Forest Road. For more information about World Mental Health Day, visit: www.time-to-change.org.uk

Give it up this October

Stoptober is back! If you're a smoker who wants to kick the habit, why not take part in the 28-day Stoptober challenge? Research shows that if smokers who stop smoking for 28 days are five times more likely to stop for good. And if you don't think you can do it by yourself, there is plenty on offer to help you – and evidence shows you're more likely to be successful in quitting if you receive support. The new Stop Smoking service in Waltham Forest is up and running and can help. They have lots of resources to make quitting easier. For more information, visit: www.everyonehealth.co.uk/waltham-forest-council or call the free helpline 0333 005 0095

Keep yourself young: Become a foster carer

Simone and David Brisley have been fostering since 2009

Have you ever thought about becoming a foster carer? We caught up with Simone and David Brisley who have been foster carers since 2009 to find out why they recommend fostering.

After retiring as managers of a children's home, the couple decided to become specialist foster carers looking after children with challenging needs.

Since 2009 they have fostered ten young people, who were almost all teenagers when they came into the Brisley's care. One of their foster children is still living with them, now aged 23.

Simone said: "We love the fun that the teenagers we have fostered bring to our home, we believe that they stimulate you and keep you younger."

"The best thing is, of course, the children and the appreciation they eventually express."

Just last week David received a birthday card from one of his former foster children. The message inside said: "Thank you for teaching me some of life's most important lessons. I couldn't have asked for a kinder father. I can't remember a time that you were not there for me."

The couple said: "If you are considering becoming a foster carer you need to be open to change and challenges. You must also have a good sense of humour."

"Fostering can be rewarding and exciting. It is life enhancing but you must be prepared for the challenges."

As Waltham Forest foster carers the couple said that they feel like part of a great team. They enjoy working with other foster carers and professionals.

They said: "We have formed some amazing, strong and professional relationships over the years."

More info

For more information about fostering in Waltham Forest, visit: www.walthamforest.gov.uk/service-categories/fostering-and-adoption

- A dedicated Social Worker and out of hours support
- A support group offering friendship and learning
- Access to a web portal with information, training and forums for foster carers
- Free membership to the Fostering Network, a national body for foster carers

You will need a spare bedroom in your home and the patience and energy to support a young person.

Teaching parents to keep their children safe and happy

Over 100 local families have completed a community parenting programme in its first year of working.

The three month long course run by the Strengthening Families Team from the Race Equality Foundation increases parents confidence and children's safety.

The programme aims to improve family relationships, empowers parents, and provides strategies to keep their children safe, helping them to develop into happy and successful adults. Mums and Dads learn how to understand and deal with issues like grooming, substance abuse, gang violence, hate crime and radicalisation.

They can also learn how to deal with day to day parenting challenges like tantruming toddlers, children struggling at school or teens not coming in when they should.

Graduating parents meet Cllr Sharon Waldron, Cabinet Member for Community Safety and Cohesion

One dad who completed the course said: "I like that this is real and doesn't sugar coat issues. This programme acknowledges the bad stuff that can happen to kids and works with that."

This term another 40 parents have signed up to courses being run in their local schools, children's centres and community spaces.

As well as learning, parents can enjoy plenty of laughs, supportive conversations and plenty of cups of tea. Course materials are available in many different languages and sessions are run at different locations and times.

Parents can also do an online safety course to teach them about the online world and its risks to their children.

Course funding is provided by the Home Office's Prevent Strategy and the Council's Community Safety Team.
